

CNC Ready to Start Building New Technical Education Centre

By 250 News

Tuesday, October 13, 2009 02:46 PM

Prince George, B.C. - The College of New Caledonia will take another step towards the construction of the $19.7 million dollar Technical Education Centre at the Prince George Campus this week with an official ground breaking ceremony.

The new centre will be built on the staff parking lot across from the John Brink Trade Centre.

College President, John Bowman says there is a large hole at the site right now as existing infrastructure was examined before any real construction could begin "Everything's looking really good, the condition of the resources in the ground is good."

On Thursday, the detailed architectural drawings of the centre will be made public as the actual construction of the new centre begins.

The new Technical Education Centre is expected to be completed February 2011.